Adding Text to a Moodle Front Page

This screenshot shows the Moodle front page editor interface. A text area contains the placeholder text "Anything you write, can and will be displayed on the front page." Above the text area is a rich text editor toolbar with various icons. Three callout boxes with arrows point to specific icons: "You can insert pictures" points to the image icon, "You can add links to webpages or files" points to the link icon, and "You can add a table to organize (create a weekly calendar)" points to the table icon. Below the text area, there are buttons for "Save and return to course" and "Cancel". A red note at the bottom right states "There are required fields in this form marked*."

This screenshot shows the Moodle front page editor with a "Topic outline" section. The main heading is "Welcome to Moodle!". Below the heading is a text area with the placeholder text "Anything you write, can and will be displayed on the front page." To the right of the text area is a toolbar with icons for adding resources, activities, and other elements. Below the toolbar are two dropdown menus: "Add a resource..." and "Add an activity...". A callout box with an arrow points to the toolbar icons, explaining their functions: "Click on the arrows to move, the hand to re-edit, the X to delete, or the eye to hide".
